

President Rodrigo R. Duterte, President of the Philippines

Dear President,

Marinel Sumook Ubaldo was only 16 years-old when she faced the disastrous effects of climate change. Marinel survived typhoon Yolanda in 2013 to become a leading youth activist, dedicated to ensuring the Philippine government, and governments around the world, confront climate change and tackle its effects on her community, and others like them.

Please support Marinel's cause by ensuring you do all you can to enable the residents of Matarinao village in Salcedo, Eastern Samar, and other vulnerable communities in the Philippines, to live in decent conditions, including having access to enough food, water, housing, electricity and toilets.

Yours sincerely

Marinel Sumook Ubaldo was 16 when she survived Typhoon Yolanda in 2013 to become a leading youth activist, dedicated to ensuring governments around the world confront climate change and tackle its effects.

Marinel, her family and thousands of others lost their homes in the typhoon and need food, water, housing, electricity and toilets. The Philippine government has not done enough and has left them to live in unsanitary conditions.

Marinel remains dedicated to ensuring governments around the world confront climate change.
