

Elsa Adshead

Member of the Darwin Amnesty Action Group for over 8 years. Convenor for over 5 years.

Activism focus in the NT has been on Youth Justice - to end the over incarceration of young people - especially Indigenous youth and address the causes such as housing, DFSV etc which leads to kids coming into contact with the care and youth justice system.

We have been involved in refugee protests outside the Darwin APOD and writing letters.

We have also been campaigning for NT and Federal Human Rights Acts and International Human Rights - particularly in Palestine, Afghanistan, Iran Sudan, Congo and people at risk

Alexia Hall

Professionally, I have a background in customer service and office management, and I have recently returned to study visual arts to use my creativity to spotlight human rights issues — particularly the ongoing apartheid in Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territories. I am deeply passionate about advocacy and regularly participate in urgent action letter-writing. I am seeking election to the South Australian ALC to actively contribute, collaborate with like-minded individuals, and help drive meaningful change.

Kate Langley

Kate Langley is an experienced youth leader, international policy professional, and committed human rights advocate. As Chair of Amnesty International Australia's Youth Advisory Group, she leads a national network of young activists, driving campaigns, community engagement, and leadership development. Over the past two years, she has also served on the SA/NT Activism Leadership Committee, and as Gaza Crisis Representative, leading regional actions and mobilising community advocacy on issues including a Human Rights Act for South Australia.

Kate has attended and facilitated multiple Amnesty activist leadership workshops, including designing and delivering a session on queer representation in the movement. Beyond Amnesty, she sits on several NGO boards focused on youth leadership, disability, and social justice, and works professionally in international policy spaces, including contributing to Australia's climate change and biodiversity commitments.

Jodie Sard

I have been a committed member of Amnesty International Australia for four years and currently serve as Acting President of the SA/NT Branch. My passion lies in defending free speech, a free press, and robust protections for whistleblowers—core pillars of a healthy democracy. I’ve led national campaigns for Julian Assange and David McBride, organised rallies, mobilised thousands through grassroots initiatives like “Meet Your MP for Assange,” and contributed to Senate submissions on whistleblower protections and Australians in arbitrary detention. I believe Amnesty must be bold and unrelenting in holding power to account, especially when it comes to protecting those who speak truth to power and human rights abuses. My experience in advocacy, policy engagement, and movement-building drives my commitment to making Amnesty a leading voice for human rights in Australia.